Getting Started with Kitchen Flasking

GROWING ORCHIDS FROM SEED, BY DUSTIN MILLER

Growing orchids from seed can feel like an impossible process, but it's more like making jam or homebrewing beer – a series of steps that take a bit of time, commitment, the right tools and an interest. In this talk he will cover a high-level view of the process that he follows, what tools you might want to get started, and more casually, why you might be interested in growing orchids from seed yourself.

Dustin is a Canadian plant hobbyist who has been growing orchids and rare plants for over 10 years; he more recently started growing orchids from seed in 2018, which has helped shift his approach to orchid culture and care.

His professional background is in software design and marketing, and his blog, herebutnot.com is where his work experience and hobby align.

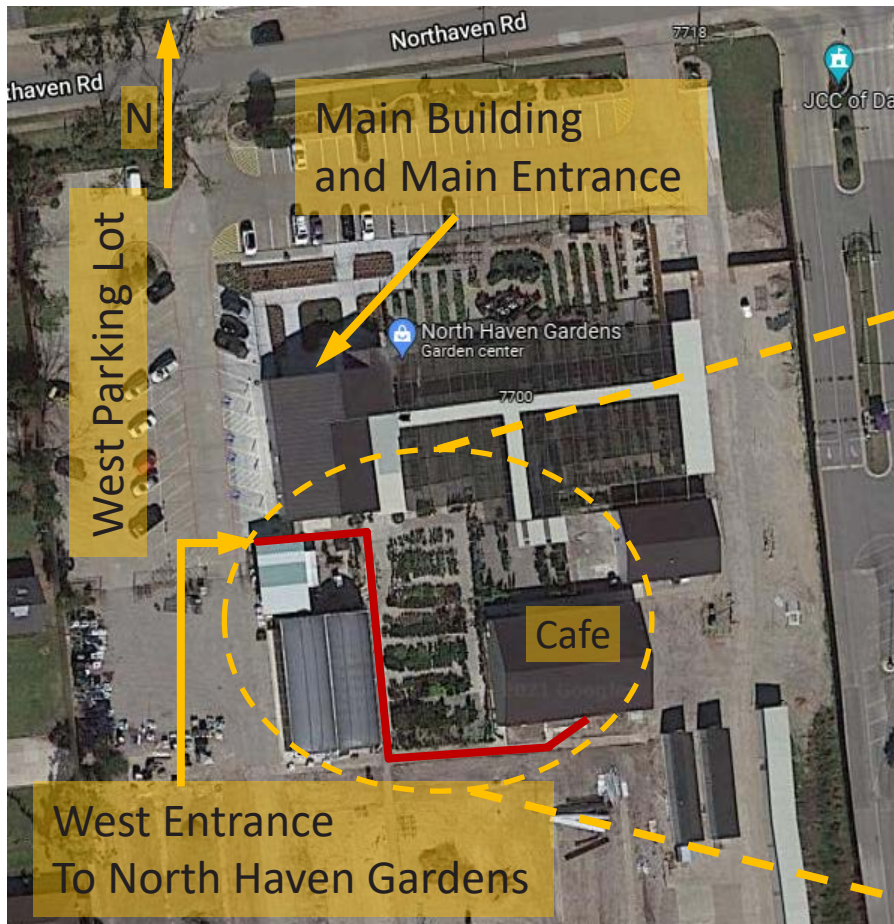

We are back at North Haven!

PRESIDENTS LETTER

Karl Varian

Well father winter decided to exert his influence in February, and consequently our meeting became a Zoom only meeting. On the bright side because of Zoom we were able to have a VERY successful meeting with over 20 attendees. I am looking forward to meeting those who want to attend in person on March 6th and virtually meet those that wish to attend virtually by way of Zoom.

At last months meeting we agreed to support an out-reach / membership drive at the Dallas Home & Garden Show. Contact David Gould if interested in spreading the word about how rewarding growing orchids is to you and your family.

For those having specific questions about orchids, Lorna Kissling and Charlie Hess will be hosting Orchids 101 at 2:00 pm in the greenhouse. For people needing carts to bring items to the meeting, we have been asked to bring them to the meeting room through the south door, NOT through the café.

In addition to our talk on "Getting Started with Kitchen Flasking & Growing Orchids from Seed" by Dustin Miller (he grows everything in his apartment), Charlie Hess will provide us with some information on the GNTOS sponsorship of the Calopogon barbatus Orchid Gami.

We are presently in the midst of pulling together everything that is needed for a GNTOS orchid show together THIS year. Progress information will be shared at the March meeting.

I personally have been busy cleaning pots, continued LOTs of repotting, and enjoying the blooming rewards of my hard work. Looking forward to 'seeing' everyone at 2:30 pm, March 6th at North Haven Gardens or on-line.

Dallas Home and Garden Show Sign-up

We need people to help out with our booth from March 4th – 6th at Dallas Market Hall, 2200 N. Stemmons Fwy, Dallas, TX 75207. We would like at least one person per time slot. Two would be better.

All you have to do is be there and answer questions for anyone who seems interested in orchids and might want to join our society. Our membership suffered during the pandemic so this is a way to try and find new members.

A lot of people come to these shows to get their plant and gardening questions answered so there are already plant people there. Some of them might not be aware that there is a group dedicated solely to orchids so let's let them know.

* This time slot will conflict with our March meeting. If someone wants to volunteer to be here that would be great. However, it is alright to leave our booth empty, but we can't take it down until after 5pm. So we will go back after the meeting.

Please email me to let me know when you can help out: youngdavegould@gmail.com
